

Transition Course from ISO 9001:2008 to ISO 9001:2015

Summary

This one-day course is designed to provide the most recent information and interpretation of the ISO/DIS 9001:2015 requirements.

This course enables participants to acquire the necessary knowledge to support an organization in their process of transitioning to ISO 9001:2015. Participants will learn the different components on how to plan and implement the transition to the new version of the standard. Moreover, the training course will also explore on the time frame of implementation and the influence on current processes.

Since the ISO 9001 is still under assessment, participants should be aware that there may be particular changes before its release as an International Standard.

Who should attend?

- Senior management;
- Persons responsible for the QMS transition and meeting new requirements in their organization;
- Persons considering implementing a new quality management system;
- ISO 9001 auditors and quality practitioners;
- Trainers and consultants;
- Operations personnel; and
- Management Representatives.

Learning objectives

- Identify the anticipated changes in the forthcoming revision of ISO 9001.

Course agenda

Section 1

This section elaborates on the course objectives, structure of the standard and provides an introduction to ISO and its network.

Section 2

This section introduces ISO/DIS 9001, and discusses the differences between the updated version and previous versions. In addition, it explains why and how previous versions have been revised to follow the common structure for management system standards, especially for those organizations practicing integrated management systems.

Section 3

This section defines the Annex SL (former known as ISO Guide 83) and explains its importance and purpose for a management system.

Section 4

This section explains in detail the new version of the standard with primary focus on the major changes that the standard has undergone, such as risk-based and process approach, documentation flexibility, better focus on stakeholders and the context of an organization.

There are also other relevant information included in this section, elaborating other changes of ISO/DIS 9001 in detail. In addition, guidelines are provided on how to measure an organization's performance and continual improvement.

Section 5

Finally, section 5 lists all corresponding standards which are affected by the transition of ISO 9001.

Furthermore, several procedures and suggestions are provided for the adjustment of the current management system to ensure effective implementation to the recent revision of ISO 9001.
